A moderate Caution, against excessive DRINKING.

OF all the Plagues, by which Mankind are curst;
 A Throat that's never satisfy'd's the worst.
 What! Alm'nack Maker preach? Thou view the Poet,
 "We will indulge the Pleasures of the Bowl;"
 Go on vain Fool, if lust thy Will can bribe,
 To scorn the Rules that Reason does prescribe;
 All Nature's Stores, cannot thy Thirst assuage,
 Thou Prodigal of Life, thou 'st mortgag'd thy old Age:
 Thy Health will fail, thy Joys will end in Sorrow;
 To live a Beast to-Day, thou'lt die a Fool To-morrow.

To make Raisin Wine.

PUT two hundred weight of raisins with the stalks,
 into a hoghead, and fill it almost full with spring
 water; let them steep about twelve days, frequently stirring them about; and after pouring the juice off press the raisins.
 Put all the liquor together in a very clean vessel. You will find it hiss for some time, and when the noise ceases
 it must be stopp'd close, and stand for six or seven months;
 and then if it proves fine and clear, rack it off into another vessel; stop it up, and let it remain twelve or fourteen weeks longer; then bottle it off.

To Make Morella wine.

Take two gallons of white wine; and twenty pounds of Morella cherries; take away the stalks, and so brase them that the stones may be broken; press the juice into the wine; and add of mace, cinnamon, and nutmeg, an ounce of each, tied in a bag grossly bruised, and hang it in the wine when you have put it up in a cask.

from my Profession ; and this Place is called after my Name. Apollo asked him what Effect this prepared Water had upon Fishes, and was told, that such as was bred in it could not be fryed or boiled with common Fire or Water; and therefore (continued he) the Doctor has a Fish-pond higher up the Hill which is filled with this Water ; this prevents its being robbed, for if the Fish is stolen they cannot be dressed ; but said Apollo, they may steal the Water too. — Poor Aquarius was dumb, and slunk off to the Doctor with his two Rats. — Apollo drove forward, and passed by the aforesaid Fish pond, which Place he named Pisces, or the Fishes, and immediately found himself at the Place where he began his Journey.

In those Days there were no Captain Cooks to discover unknown Lands, and spread Poxes among the Inhabitants and the People of this Island were so ignorant, as to suppose their little Spot. The whole Extent of Earth : This Journey therefore was accounted worthy of immortal Honour. so they called the Sun Apollo, and the Portions of the Zodiac these Names we have already mentioned.
